Example of a 30-second commercial

Hello, my name is John Smith. I have 5 years of experience as a security guard with expertise in the fields of Security Assistance and Cooperation, Program Management and Training, and Strategic Planning. I have the ability to work with diverse groups and bring them to a consensus. I understand the team concept as a leader and a follower, and I can problem solve. I have led complex organizations successfully at all levels in a multi-national arena and received awards from the U.S. Army and the U.S. Department of State. I am interested in expanding my experience into the fields of national security and defense cooperation abroad.

Commonly Asked Interview Questions and Answer Tips

“Tell me about yourself.”
The key to answering this or any other interview question is to offer a response that supports your career objective. The challenge is to keep your answer short (about 1 minute) and focused. An interviewer often asks this question to find out if you are the kind of person who will fit in well with his or her company. You do not want to give the interviewer a long biography of your life that has nothing to do with your skills and achievements. The whole point of the interview is to show that you are the right person for the job. You may choose to tell a story that relates the origin of your interest in the career field. Another approach is to connect the personal characteristics, goals, and events that motivated you to pursue this opportunity. You may also mention what you are really passionate about related to your career and how you might bring this passion to the company once hired.

“Why do you want to work in this industry?”
Show the interviewer that you have thought about your career path and researched in-depth the industry that you are pursuing. Show the fit between yourself and the industry. How do your talents complement the industry? What about the industry interests you? Discuss any industry-related experiences that you have had and how they have confirmed your interest.

“Why do you want to work here?”
Show the interviewer your interest in the company. Share what you learned about the job and the company through your own research. Talk about how your professional skills will benefit the company.

“What are your strengths?”
If you have sufficiently researched the organization, you should be able to imagine what skills the company values. List them, and then give examples where you have demonstrated these skills.

“What are your weaknesses?”
Everyone has weaknesses, but the interviewer wants to know if you have any weaknesses that will prevent you from doing the particular job well. Discuss with the interviewer a weakness that you feel you have developed strategies to overcome. For example, if you do not like making cold calls, tell the interviewer about the phone scripts you wrote that helped you to overcome this fear. Always reassure the employer that you are confident that you can either work with or overcome the weakness.
“What are your career goals?”
The interviewer wants to know if your plans and the company's goals are compatible. Let him or her know that you are ambitious enough to plan ahead. Talk about your desire to learn more and improve your performance, and be as specific as possible about how you will meet the goals you have set for yourself.

“What are your extracurricular activities?”
The interviewer may be looking for evidence of your job skills outside of your professional experience. For example, hobbies, such as chess or bridge demonstrate analytical skills. Reading, music, and painting are creative hobbies. Individual sports show determination and stamina, while group sport activities may indicate you are comfortable working as part of a team. Also, the interviewer might simply be curious as to whether you have a life outside of work. Employees who have creative or athletic outlets for their stress are often healthier, happier, and more productive.

“Describe a difficult situation you have been through.” Or “What has been your biggest challenge?”
The interviewer is interested in hearing you describe your coping skills. Think of a time you had difficulty either at school or in a career-related experience and describe it. Talk about the effective ways you handled the issue. Never speak negatively about a professor, boss, or fellow student.

“Do you have any questions for me?”
Always ask two or three questions and have more prepared in advance. This is your opportunity to learn more about the employer and to demonstrate your interest in the position available. Consider asking questions about the company culture, evaluation processes, current issues the industry is facing and/or other questions that relate to the job specifically or the organization as a whole. The interview is not the time to ask questions about salary, benefits, hours, or vacation. This information may be critical for you in making your decision but wait until you have been offered the job before asking about them.

Other questions to consider:
Your qualifications
- What can you do for us that someone else cannot do?
- What qualifications do you have that relate to the position?
- What new skills or capabilities have you developed recently?
- Give me an example from a previous job where you have shown initiative.
- What is important to you in a job?
- What motivates you in your work?
- What qualities do you find important in a coworker/boss?
Your career goals
- What would you like to be doing five years from now?
- How will you judge self-success? How will you achieve success?
- How will this job fit in your career plans?
- What do you expect from this job?
- Can you travel?

Your experience
- What have you learned from your past jobs/experiences?
- What were your biggest responsibilities?
- How does your previous experience relate to this position?
- What did you like most/least about your last job?
- Whom may we contact for references?

Your education
- How do you think your education has prepared you for this position?
- What were your favorite classes/activities at school?
- Why did you choose your major?
- Do you plan to continue your education?
